

Immaculate Conception Rectory

Eventhough this building has been altered by its exterior covering and additions it remains significant for its role among the many structures on Satyrs Hill that demonstrate the importance of the Catholic church in Towson.

The alterations do not hide either some very nice design features such as the round arched portico or the beautiful stained glass window of the west facade.

The building was designed as a rectory and has been used as such since 1908.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Immaculate Conception Rectory, which is located on a ridge North of Ware Avenue in addition to the Church, Convent and school buildings, is a stuccoed two story slate roofed structure rich in Victorian elements which are exhibited in its plan and ornamentation. The main or south facade is two bays wide and features a recessed porch two bays wide (partially enclosed by one bay) which has round arches with keys. A small, almost square window with shutters and a doorway with transom are housed in the porch (doorway is located West of the center of the facade). The second story has a gallery supported by cantalevers, and is enclosed by a board railing which is decorated by negative space carvings with a fleur de leis pattern. Two 1/1 sash windows with shutters are present on this story. The structure is also characterized by deep overhanging eaves. Also visible on the south facade is a hipped roof dormer vented by two 1/1 sash windows.

The east facade is three bays deep; the porch constitutes the third bay resulting in irregular fenestration. The second story features a large bay window which is composed of three lights, and includes one large 1/1 sash window flanked by two smaller 1/1 sash windows. Also present are two 1/1 windows with shutters. The first story features the round arch of the porch, one 1/1 window with shutters which measure 6' x 3'. A hipped roof dormer vented by two 2/2 windows is present. Also visible on the east facade is a high (28") stone foundation which exhibits some elements of coursing and beaded grouting. A cellar entrance located slightly to the North of the center which is flanked by a 1/1 casement window is also visible.

In the northeast bay of the north facade there is a partially enclosed single story porch with arched paneling over the entranceway. An exterior corbelled chimney located to the West of the center causes irregular fenestration on this facade. The first story has a centrally located 1/1 window with shutters; the second story features three 1/1 windows irregularly placed. The westernmost bay on the first story exhibits a clapboard sided entrance.

The west facade is the size of three bays but is vented by numerous, variously shaped and placed windows. On the first story there is a centrally located entrance with gable end hood and slate roof. Above the hood but off-center is a lead and stain glass window, which is flanked by two round arch windows. On either side of the round arch windows are one 1/1 sash shuttered windows. The round arch window to the north is a full story in height and incorporates a sash window and a panel in its framework. On the first story there are three 1/1 sash windows with shutters and four small windows vent the basement. Much of the west facade was difficult to describe because a single story brick garage is located three feet away from this side.

The first floor of this structure is based on a side hall plan. There is a small room in the northwest corner. Also present is a switch back stairway which has a stain glass window against the west wall. The stair case is open string and features a newel post. The stain glass window which is present is of the "Muse of Music". The window is characterized by a classical motif and the presominate colors are greens, blue and yellows. The muse's gown is made-up of textured (sculptured) yellow glass.

On the east side of the building there are two parlors. The southeast parlor has entrance to the porch and contains a classical revival fireplace which is purely decorative in nature. It is composed of orange-glazed brick and a mantle piece with medallions and swag and garland raised motifs. The easternmost parlor is a dining room which is lighted by the double windows previously mentioned (on the east facade). This dining room has 10 ft. ceilings and a 7'4" x 34" doorway.

From inspection of the interior, it appears there was a porch of either side of a pantry and that the northwest porch is now enclosed with clapboards. The northwest corner provides for kitchen.

The hallway leads into a fragmented area which provides for three entrance-ways- the north exterior entrance, the basement entrance and access to back stairs.

The basement is subdivided into three rooms which are partitioned by vertical beaded tongue-and-groove paneling. One room has a four paneled door with porcelain doorknobs. The walls of the basement are uncoursed stone which have been plastered.

The second floor has a large room in the southeast corner. In the southeast corner of the room is a corner cupboard. The bay window with a window seat is also present here. Three smaller bedrooms and one bathroom are also on the second story.

From observation of interior it is found that all stairways converge at a point which accounts for the small arch window seen on the west facade.

One more flight up is a 3/4 story which contains three bedrooms and one bathroom
